

Competitive Landscape Memo: Riverside Commons (Austin, TX)

Prepared by: Market Intelligence | Date: February 12, 2026

Background

Riverside Commons has shown a consistent month-over-month revenue decline since December 2025. This memo summarizes the competitive factor most likely driving the trend.

New Competitive Entrant

TrailBlazer Sports opened a 15,000 sq ft store on December 8, 2025, located approximately 0.4 miles from Riverside Commons. TrailBlazer's assortment overlaps heavily with ours in footwear and apparel, and their opening promotion (30% off storewide for the first six weeks) ran directly through the holiday shopping period, our seasonally strongest window.

Observed Effects

Foot traffic counters at Riverside Commons show an 18% year-over-year decline for the December-January period, materially worse than the -3% average decline across other South region stores over the same window. Loyalty program data indicates a measurable increase in lapsed customers in the Riverside Commons trade area relative to other stores, consistent with customers shifting spend to the new entrant.

Recommendation

Store Operations and Marketing should evaluate a localized win-back promotion for the Riverside Commons trade area and consider an updated assortment review to differentiate from TrailBlazer Sports' offering. This is being tracked separately from the April AeroFit Running Shoes stockout, which affected all stores nationally and is not specific to Riverside Commons.
